City of Linköping has the 1% rule for public art

Work with public art in Linköping municipality according to the 1% rule

Since the end of the 1990s, the municipality of Linköping has been actively working on the construction of public art according to the so-called 1% rule. In an extract from the City Council's minutes 2010-03-30 (Dnr KS 2010-198) this work is described as follows:

“In the case of new construction of buildings for municipal operations, the companies must set aside 1% of the building cost for artistic design in the investment calculation. In this context, new construction also includes extensions and such conversions that are caused by changed use.

The funds set aside for artistic decoration of buildings where the municipality is the tenant shall be made available to the culture and sport committee. ”

The execution of the public design assignments takes place in collaboration between the culture and sport administration and the companies or the municipal boards and administrations that carry out the new construction. The Culture and sport Administration is responsible for Linköping Public Art, which is part of Passagen Linköping's contemporary Art Gallery.
